DEDICATION

To those heroic men who, even in the strained and troublous times of the nation's struggle for independence, so believed in their inalienable rights and privileges of education and religious liberty that no difficulties were insurpassable to them—

The Founding and the Founders of Hampden-Sidney College

ALONG the Atlantic Seaboard from New York to South Carolina, educational facilities in the eighteenth century were provided mainly by Presbyterians—The College of William and Mary being the chief exception. Many of the Scotch, Scotch-Irish, and Huguenot inhabitants of this section were educated men who desired educational advantages for their children because they knew that an educated ministry and educated laymen were necessary for the best interests of Church and State. So, wherever they settled they arranged for the establishment of schools. This effort resulted in the organization of the so-called "Log Colleges," private academies under the control of tried and trusted teachers. Some of these were deservedly famous in their day and gave to the new country many young men of mental force and moral power. In Pennsylvania, the Tennents were at Neshaminy, Samuel Blair was at New Londonderry; Samuel Finley was at Nottingham in Maryland; while in New Jersey Messrs. Dickerson and Burr "fostered the incipient college now known as the College of New Jersey." Later it became evident that the educational system must rest on concerted effort and corporate support. To this latter method of solving the educational problem Hampden-Sidney owes its existence.

It has been said that an institution is but the elongated shadow of a man. This is often true; for instance, the University of Virginia is the academic incarnation of Thomas Jefferson. In the effort to apply this doctrine to Hampden-Sidney, Mr. Hugh Blair Grigsby in a spirit of enthusiastic generalization says: "I might be justified in saying that the founder of your (i. e. Hampden-Sidney) College was John Knox." It would, perhaps, be nearer the truth to say that Hampden-Sidney is the daughter of the "Log Colleges" of 1720-1750. If the credit of founding Hampden-Sidney College could be given to one man, that man would clearly be Samuel Davies (1723-1761), though he had no official connection with it; for this remarkable man was the apostle of Presbyterianism in Virginia, was the organizer of this church in the colony, and was the upholder and able defender of religious toleration in the Old Dominion. The Synod of New York in 1755 appointed the Reverend Messrs. Samuel Davies, John Todd, Alexander Craighead, Robert Henry, John Wright and John Brown "to be a Presbytery under the name of the Presbytery of Hanover." In July, 1759, Mr. Davies was inaugurated President of Princeton College and thus his connection with Hanover Presbytery was severed. But the Presbytery which he organized and the group of men of whom he had been the leader "carried on." On February 1st, 1775, the Presbytery—then consisting of the Reverend Messrs. Sankey, Rice, Leake, Irwin and Wallace—met at the house of Captain Nathaniel Venable, in Prince Edward County, to arrange for the organization of a school. On the next day, those gentlemen decided to build an academy at the head of Hudson's Branch; on February 3d, they chose Samuel Stanhope Smith, Rector; and on January 1st, 1776, the academy opened its doors for work, with a board of trustees of influential men, Presbyterians and Episcopalians, with Rev. S. S. Smith as president and with John Blair Smith, Samuel Doak and David Witherspoon as assistants. One hundred and ten students enrolled during the first summer, a number too large for the accommodations. So Hanover Presbytery set the school going, but this is not the whole story.

While technically and historically Hampden-Sidney was the creature of Samuel Davies and his associates of Hanover Presbytery, it is evident—as has already been stated—that this was a community enterprise enjoying the support of the Episcopalians of this section of Virginia.

The Academy Trustees were Reverend Messrs. Sankey, Todd, Leake, Wallace, Rice and McRoberts—the clericals. The laymen were Mr. Peter Johnston, the donor of the land on which the College stands; Paul Carrington, of Charlotte, member of the House of Burgesses and Judge of the Court of Appeals; John Nash, of Prince Edward, almost feudal lord of "Templeton"; John Morton, of Charlotte, patriot and soldier; Nathaniel Venable, of Prince Edward, who, with John Morton and James Allen, fed the students in time of need; Thomas Read, long clerk of Charlotte and a fine type of colonial civilization; James Venable, brother of Nathaniel, Prince Edward planter; Francis Watkins, of Prince Edward, another of the old clerks and trustee for forty years; Patrick Henry, the matchless orator, the man of overshadowing fame; John Tabb, of Amelia, burgess and soldier; William Cabell, of "Union Hill," a man of broad outlook and earnest purpose, ancestor of "the Cabells and their kin"; James Madison, fourth President of the United States; Joseph Parke, Charles Allen and James Allen, all of Prince Edward, and trustees of both the Academy and College; William Morton, of Charlotte, "beneath whose unerring aim, on the field of Guilford, the gallant Colonel Webster, the eye of the army of Cornwallis, fell to rise no more"; William Booker, who, with William Watts, represented Prince Edward in the Virginia Convention of 1776; Samuel Woodson Venable, ensign in the Hampden-

Sidney company of volunteers and colonel in the Continental Army; and Thomas Scott, of Charlotte, burgess and father of fighting sons.

A careful reading of this list of trustees will show that the College came into being not only because of Presbyterian influence and initiative but also because of social and economic conditions prevailing in the valleys of the Staunton and of the Appomattox. The rich planters on the James and in the Tidewater could send their sons to England, or, if they could do no better, to William and Mary. The residents in Southside Virginia, pioneers in a comparatively new country, not wealthy but comfortable, knowing the value of an education, but unable to obtain it at a heavy expense, felt impelled to provide suitable scholastic advantages for their sons in their own territory.

Thus the Scotch-Irish from Pennsylvania, from the Valley and from Eastern Virginia; the English, who, in successive stages, moved up from the low country; the Huguenots, who had settled on the James; all, Presbyterians and Episcopalians, were willing and eager to join hands cordially in a united effort to initiate and to press to accomplishment all plans for the common good. "The courtly manners of Williamsburg, the cheerfulness and ease of the Huguenots, the honest frankness and stern independence of the English country gentleman, the activity and shrewdness of the merchant, the simplicity of republican life—all have been combined."

These causes, these commingling elements, had produced a good seed-bed for an educational enterprise. The seed sprouted and grew. In 1783, the Academy, planted and watered by Samuel Stanhope Smith and his faithful coadjutors, bloomed out into a chartered college under the same trustees in the main, but with John Blair Smith in his brother's place. With bright prospects it started on its new development—but that is another story.

JONATHAN CUSHING

THE COLLEGE

Jonathan Peter Cushing, A. M.

THE statistical abstract of President Cushing's life is brief. It would read about as follows: Born in Rochester, N. H., March 12, 1793; graduated at Dartmouth College, August, 1817; Librarian and Tutor in Hampden-Sidney College, 1817-1818; Professor of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, 1819-1835; President, 1821-1835; married Miss Lucy Jane Page, 1827; member of American Education Society, 1831-1835; died in Raleigh, N. C., April 25, 1835.

But this record in no way rivals the real man nor gives hint of his marvelous activity and efficient service. The old order at Hampden-Sidney terminated with Dr. Hoge. Under Mr. Cushing, the College entered upon a new existence.

Left an orphan at ten years of age, Jonathan Cushing had few advantages; and, in 1806, he found himself as an apprentice to a saddler in his home town. He became proficient in his trade, and, by working at his bench, he was able to defray his expenses at Phillips Exeter Academy. In the fall of 1815, he entered the Junior Class in Dartmouth College. Early neglect, sedentary habits and hard work had undermined his health. Advised to go South, the young graduate set out for Charleston, S. C., intending to study law there. On reaching Richmond, Va., he met Dr. John Holt Rice who induced him to join the teaching force of Hampden-Sidney. When he reached the College, November 1, 1817, the tutor found conditions most discouraging. The equipment was poor; the attendance was small. Furthermore, the University of Virginia was just coming to the birth, and Mr. Jefferson was opposing Hampden-Sidney's advancement with all his might. But—Mr. Cushing had come, and all was well!

A subordinate in name, Mr. Cushing was from the start the moving spirit in the management of things; the trustees at once recognized in him a dynamic force. In 1817, he taught the classics and mathematics; in 1818, he was made librarian and was added to the committee to revise the laws of the College and the curriculum of study; in 1819, he was chosen Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy. In the same year, measures were taken to raise money for buildings, and the new professor was chairman of the committee having charge of this project. In 1820, after Dr. Hoge's death, Mr. Cushing, under a commission of the Board of Trustees, discharged the duties of the President; in the fall of 1821, he was made President.

A college, founded by Hanover Presbytery and for fifty years presided over by Presbyterian divines, was now in the hands of a layman of Episcopal proclivities, who, though devout and reverent, was not, at that time, a member of any church. A young man, only four years out of college, was to occupy the seat of the aged Dr. Hoge; a Yankee saddler was to discipline and train the sons of proud Virginia planters. Results were eminently satisfactory; wisdom was justified of her children. The course of study was reorganized and greatly enriched; new professorships were established; old buildings were removed; Cushing Hall, the Steward's Hall, and a new church were erected; the old era had ended, and physical conditions in broad outline became what they are to-day. By 1830, the whole system was pulsating with life and Hampden-Sidney was the equal of any American college of the day—North or South.

President Cushing, in 1824, organized, at Hampden-Sidney, the Literary and Philosophical Society—Dr. Rice and Professor Marsh being his coadjutors. In 1831, this Society was enlarged into the Virginia Historical and Philosophical Society, which—reorganized in 1847—became the Virginia Historical Society.

But these incessant and arduous duties proved too much for a body naturally frail. In the spring of 1835, Mr. Cushing was forced to give up work, and set out for Charleston en route for the West Indies in search of health. But he was too weak to go far, and was compelled to stop at Raleigh, N. C., where the end came April 25, 1835.

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON

CLASSES

President William Henry Harrison (1791)

THIS distinguished alumnus, born February 9, 1773, was the third son of Benjamin Harrison of "Berkeley"—member of the Continental Congress, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and Governor of Virginia. The boy entered Hampden-Sidney College in 1787. Among his fellow-students were Judge Dabney Carr, Senator George M. Bibb, Dr. James Jones and Rev. Moses Waddell. After leaving college, young Harrison, for a short time, studied medicine, then joined the army as ensign in the First U. S. Infantry, and was appointed captain at twenty-one.

Much of his very active life was spent in winning the great Northwest Territory of which he was the first Representative in Congress. While in Congress, he was appointed Governor of the Indiana Territory, with much of the newly acquired Louisiana Territory under his jurisdiction. In the great battle of Tippecanoe, May 7, 1811, General Harrison signally defeated the Indians, "the Prophet" being killed and the power of Tecumseh broken. During the War of 1812, he was Commander-in-Chief of the whole Department of the West, proving himself a skillful soldier and a gifted executive.

For the last twenty-five years of his life, General Harrison was a man of peace, serving the State of Ohio and the United States in important offices. In 1816, he was elected to Congress; from 1819 to 1821, he was a member of the State Senate of Ohio; in 1824, he was sent to the United States Senate; before his term expired he was appointed first Minister to the new Republic of Columbia. In 1840, General Harrison was nominated by the Whigs as their candidate for the Presidency, with John Tyler, his old neighbor from Virginia, as his running-mate. "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too" were elected; but the President lived just one month after his inauguration. Pneumonia, with gastric complications, proved too much for a constitution weakened by long years of hardship and exposure on the frontier and in the field. He died April 4, 1841.

Here's to old Hampden-Sidney,
The garnet and the gray,
And the team of tried heroes
Who defend her name to-day;
Our old Alma Mater
We'll e'er be true to thee,
For we'll spread with song and story
The fame of H.-S. C.

The Yell

Rah! rah! rah!

Rah, rah!
Team! Hampden-Sidney! Team!

To Old Hampden-Sidney

Here's to old Hampden-Sidney a glass of the finest,
Red, ruby Rheinish filled up to the brim.
Her sons they are many, unrivalled by any;
With hearts o'erflowing, we will sing this hymn:

Rah! rah! old H-S, rah!
Our old Alma Mater's sons we are!
We will herald the story,
And die for the glory;
For red and gray are ever waving high!

As Fresh we explore her, as Sophs we adore her,
And carve our names upon her ancient wall!
As Juniors patrol her, as Seniors extol her;
We trust our Alma Mater's power in all!

Who would ever imagine that in this little runt one may find one of the best college wrestlers in this part of the country? But just take another look at his neck—he can't even wear a seventeen collar with comfort! When anyone has a neck like that, one may think easily the worst or best about him. But in "Aqui's" case it is always the best. We have nowhere found a better or a more true-hearted friend. Handicapped by not having discovered until his Junior year that Hampden-Sidney was the only school for him, he has, nevertheless, in his two years here made himself an indispensable part of the college and its unforgettable friendships.

It is not often that one finds a man of such pertinacity and bull-doggedness as Randolph. When he has once seen his point clearly, he draws straight to it and not the chief of all the fiends could remove him. For he is sincere in his beliefs, and nothing can shake an earnest faith, so he is well fitted for his chosen profession—the ministry.

"Unassuming, yet sincere and true," are the words which we can apply without hesitancy to "Ed." He is a Halifax product of which they should be justly proud. And he should boast of the fact that he is—with the exception of his "ole lady"—the only man in school who has kept the same roommate for four years. His wit alone, as a member of this renowned pair, is enough to justify his fame. It is with regret that we see him leave, and we wish him success and happiness along the highway of life.

If there was ever a man who needed no write-up, it is Gordon. Run your eye down the list above if you doubt it. Hardly noticed his freshman year, he evinced so dynamic a personality later that he could not be kept down. It was impossible for him not to accomplish what he has. And to prove the breadth of his field of endeavor, he has not stopped at one phase, but tried them all, and succeeded.

Getting off to a good start his freshman year, George found it easy going the rest of his time at H.-S. C. An ardent admirer of everything feminine, the seven miles to Farmville seemed but a step from Venable Hall. The German Club was a favorite hangout for this Norfolk man when any music was around. "Where's George?" "Oh, he's at the house, playing the Victrola and writing letters." And there you have him.

He can be serious when there is need for it, however, and his records show that he is a consistent, hard-working student. With the fair sex he is also a favorite and there are few date nights that he does not grace the State Teachers College. Sincere and unselfish, a true friend and agreeable companion, he has won a host of friends who wish him well.

If one were to ask who the most widely known Hampden-Sidney undergraduate is, every hand would point to Frank. He has traveled all over the country in the interest of the College, the Y. M. C. A hard worker, earnest and sincere, one may well predict that in after life his fame will extend even wider than now.

We have all too little appreciation for those whose course in life does not concur with ours, and so often fail to realize how difficult is the task of school life to one like Hooker who has seen service in the Navy during the war, and has later returned to school, determined to be a fisher of men. He faithfully followed this one ideal, and has brought every iota of his energy to work for its fulfillment. This, debating, and kindred subjects have been his sole interests in College. But his constant devotion has been such as to merit and receive the true reward.

Have you ever looked upon features of more grim determination? "Flem" is the sort of man who does what he thinks is right, and does it with as few words as possible. There was never a better boy—or a better autocrat—than he. Barred from athletics, his natural field, by circumstances of which he was not master, he turned to publications, and as editor-in-chief of The 1925 Kaleidoscope, effected a drastic transition from a small-school year-book to a work of austere art. To begin with, "Charlie" is literary. That epithet cannot be denied one whose stories and poems have gained him the position of editor of The Hampden-Sidney Magazine, and who is well recognized as a debater and orator. The success of the Jongleurs under his leadership, and his vivid portrayals of the characters of Mr. Baxter in "Seventeen" and of Doogan in "Stop Thief!" can attest without superfluous verbiage to his capacities as an actor. "Charlie," in seeing you—student, orator, debater, actor, editor and friend—leave, we are confident that Hampden-Sidney has added another worthy alumnus to her list.

"Larry" has been a consistent and valuable worker in many phases of college activity. We have with us to-day the poet-laureate of Hampden-Sidney College, uncrowned and sinecure, it is true, but nevertheless a poet-laureate who can write prolificly upon any subject at any time. We truly believe that he is sending himself through college and supporting a family with the royalties from only these carloads of ballads he is turning out annually for "Asa D's" English II. True, he is unassuming, but if you get close to him, you cannot fail to realize the strength of his personality.

Had "Jack" lived fifty years ago, there can be no doubt but that he would have been esteemed the typical old Virginia gentleman. And, furthermore, he is now. One cannot look upon that dark, wavy hair, those gentle yet strong features, his unbounded courtesy in every respect without feeling oneself under the spell of the Old South. Charlotte Court House, that treasure-house of so many remarkable Hampden-Sidney men, increased the debt of the College to her many fold when she sent us "Jack." And we must not forget, either, that this is the man whom Coach Bernier termed the best manager he had ever had.

His name is Winston, but we, who know him best, delight most to call him "Bull." The name stands for much but the possessor of it stands for a great deal more. As a friend you can find none better in every sense of the word. He is one of the few Tigers who have cleared the pole ten and a half feet and has rolled up many scores for Hampden-Sidney in track. His goal is set high and there is no doubt in our minds that he will surely attain this goal. "Bull," we wish you much success.

Somehow or other we have never been able to know "Jazz" very well. But we are sure that down deep in him lies something extremely worth-while. We know there is, else he could not pass all his work all the time, with no mean smattering of first grades. "Jazz" is exclusive, yes, but we have never seen a game of cards, chess or checkers in the "Y" that was complete without him. Another thing that speaks well for him is that no one can remember ever having heard of his losing his temper; he seems always in a good humor.

"Little Ichabod" has fought his way to the top rung of the football ladder, earning the coveted "H" his last year in college. He has also been a diligent worker in track. But next to these, perhaps even before them, his favorite sport has been to burn the midnight oil, or rather Mazdas, with most favorable results. But Dame Rumor has it that he is the latest addition to the All Fools Brotherhood, that calic has driven completely from his mind his little Latin and much Greek. "Scrap"—a fighter, one who is never downed because he doesn't know what it is to be beaten. A brilliant mind coupled with such invincible indefatigability as is his should work wonders for his cause, for with him it is always not himself, but his cause, which counts. Woe unto those who oppose him when he throws his full powers into action, a thing which he has not always seen fit to do in college. Unmistakably a leader on the campus, he is noted for his astuteness, his calmness, his decisiveness. WILLIAM FORD BULL

ATHLETICS

William Ford Bull

WHEN, in the fall of 1892, Billy Bull, then a youth of eighteen, entered Hampden-Sidney, he found athletics in a deplorable condition. True, they were no worse than they had been. But, at a time when, under the venerable Dr. Richard McIlwaine, the College was flourishing as never before, when the student body, the largest in the history of the College until recent years, and alumni contained many men, now famous, when intercollegiate athletics were striding to the fore in seven-league boots, Hampden-Sidney could boast of but few miserable class teams, and these functioning sporadically, if at all.

To lead the booming college from this slough of stagnation, a Napoleon was needed, and that genius had appeared in the diminutive Billy Bull, of Norfolk. Where he obtained his experience has not yet appeared, but he threw his whole dynamic personality into the work with a vim and vigor which the whole school soon imbibed, and engendered the Tiger spirit which was to become famous even before his four years were over. The fact that, in his freshman year, he captained both the college football and baseball teams well attests to the enthusiasm with which he was received. No record can be found of the football season, but the baseball team defeated the University of Virginia, 9 to 7, and, in the rest of its contests, accumulated a total of 55 to their opponents' 24. The next year and on until his graduation, Bull was captain of both football and baseball (of the latter E. Lee Trinkle was manager all three years and of the former his senior year), a member of the track team and instructor in the gymnasium. As vice president of the Athletic Association, Bull, in 1894, carried on the work initiated with Dandridge Spottswood the previous year and induced Major Richard Venable to "fit out a new athletic field," and to relieve the individual players, to some extent, from furnishing their own equipment.

Athletics were steadily progressing, and by the time Bull's senior year (1896) was reached, Hampden-Sidney, in its five football games, had gained three victories over Randolph-Macon, Roanoke and an unnamed college (seemingly V. P. I.), and had a baseball schedule which included the Universities of Virginia, Maryland, Johns Hopkins, Washington and Lee, besides V. P. I., St. Alban's, Randolph-Macon, Richmond, Roanoke, and the Petersburg league team. Hampden-Sidney was well on its way as a potent factor in the athletic world, due almost wholly to the impetus given to it by this one man, William Ford Bull, D. D., at the present time a missionary to Korea, who deserves, above all others, the title, "the father of intercollegiate athletics at Hampden-Sidney."

REVIEW OF YEAR'S ATHLETICS

Football, 1925

ONCE again these loyal sons of Hampden-Sidney went out and by their clean playing, grit, gentlemanly conduct and athletic ability, added to the fame of "Old Hampden-Sidney." They trained faithfully, as they have always done, and they were clean and wholesome in their habits. This year has been a true character builder and has been a decided step forward in morale. No greater tribute can be paid them than when we say that they broke training as they would have if their mothers had seen them do it.

This year's squad traveled between three thousand and thirty-five hundred miles to participate in contests with other colleges on their home grounds. The Tigers played only two games at home this year but plans for next year promise more games in Death Valley. Under Coach Bernier's plan of building back the old prestige of Hampden-Sidney, teams of much greater size and of much greater reserve strength were met. Though greater in these respects there were none that could surpass the fighting spirit of the Tigers of Death Valley.

Early in September, when Coach Bernier issued his call for football candidates, there returned to Death Valley seven letter men, along with some forty second string men and freshmen. From this time on to the final game on November 21st, these men gave their all for the school they loved so well.

The Tigers journeyed to Charlottesville to battle the Cavaliers on September 26th. The willing but inexperienced squad of Hampden-Sidney fought the first game of the season, losing by a 40 to 0 score. Virginia did practically all of her scoring in the first half, the Garnet and Gray coming back in the second half with the characteristic fight and allowing only one touchdown. A new team faced V. P. I. on the following Saturday. The lamb of the previous Saturday had dyed its wool and added a tail and a ferocious growl, and became once more a Tiger. The Tigers played great ball and for the first time in their history came out of the first half on the long end of the score, due to a beautiful drop-kick by Alexander. In the second half the Techmen managed to shove over two touchdowns and by virtue of strong reserve strength, to win, 13 to 3.

For the third game of the year the schedule called for the longest trip ever undertaken by a Tiger team when they invaded Florida to play the University at Gainsville. Down among the Everglades the little bunch of battlers from Hampden-Sidney staged a wonderful scrap against the Florida "Gators" but superior strength in the line caused the downfall of the Virginians and the "Gators" emerged victorious, 22 to 6. On one occasion the Tigers worked the ball down the field for sixty yards by a series of passes only to lose the ball on an intercepted pass. Immediately following this, "Spritter" Adkins snatched up a fumble and raced forty yards for a touchdown. To quote THE RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH—"Hampden-Sidney won admiration by the plucky fight they put up. They came back with the glory of defeat plus a 6 to 22 score."

Then came the turning of the long, long road when the Tigers visited the home of the Hornets and defeated them 13 to 0. Lynchburg was on the defensive the greater part of the game and only by great punting kept down the score. The Hornets were unable to pierce the Tiger line and attempted end runs were stopped by the Hampden-Sidney ends and backs before they reached the line of scrimmage. Early in the game Lyons went through tackle for the first score, and Palmer added another in the fourth quarter when he broke through center for eighteen yards.

The following week Roanoke invaded Death Valley with a strong backfield and a much-touted line. Minus all regulars in the backfield, Hampden-Sidney played a fine game only to be defeated, 6 to 0, by a well executed pass in the final quarter. The game took place in a sea of mud and the Tigers were outweighed thirty pounds to the man, but in spite of adverse conditions the outcome was in doubt until the end. In the first half the Maroons were held for downs within the Hampden-Sidney ten-yard line. Hamilton punted from ankle deep mud for thirty yards and Roanoke's big chance was lost. In the last quarter Roanoke gained possession of the ball by blocking a kick and made the only score of the game. The Tigers put up the finest brand of defensive play seen on Death Valley in years. Then came Elon. Fighting in sleet and snow, the Tigers displayed the best offensive of the whole year and, led by Adkins, rolled up a 31 to 0 score. Dudley, Palmer and Jones scored touchdowns, and Adkins two.

No game of the season received more newspaper publicity than that in which Davidson was tied, 6 to 6. For wide-spread was the fame of the Wildcats; nowhere was there any doubt but what the victory was theirs. But the "dope" vanished like gossamer the moment the game started. Though Davidson, by taking advantage of a break, had scored in the first half and delayed the Tigers' drive, yet at the very beginning of the second half it burst forth, and, like a torrent, paraded down the field until the last white line was crossed. Aided by that irresistible thin red line, and the famous Brinser-Adkins passing combination, Edmunds, in a series of beautiful line plunges, had tied the score. "All honor goes to the Tigers from the Old Dominion."

After the gruelling game with Davidson came a lapse resulting in a defeat which, in the eyes of all true and loyal Tigers, was the most disastrous of the whole season. On November 14th Hampden-Sidney was laid low, 12 to 0, by her traditional rival, the University of Richmond. Again the dope was upset, for the Tigers were slated to win by a considerable margin. Though showing bursts of their accustomed brand of football, and advancing within striking distance of the goal on several occasions, the Tigers were unable to overcome the Spiders' first tally gained early in the first quarter. Richmond scored again when Goode intercepted a hurried pass from Brinser and raced sixty yards for a touchdown. Immediately afterwards the final whistle blew.

In the final game of the season, on Mayo Island, Hampden-Sidney swamped Randolph-Macon by a 26 to 0 score. The Jackets gave superhuman resistance to the hard hitting Tigers but to no avail. Palmer's end runs and the passing combination of Brinser to Adkins featured the game.

On paper the season looks rather bad: three victories, one tie and five defeats. But it saw a more ambitious schedule undertaken, and great strides made toward a winning team next year. Dudley, center and captain, was all that could be desired in the way of a leader. Adkins, Brinser, Richardson, Edmunds, Palmer and Lyons were outstanding in the backfield, and Clarke, Myles, Roberts, Nance, Worden, Turley, Stover, Simmerman and Reveley were bulwarks in the line. There were no individual players; it was always the team.

Basketball, 1925-26

IN THE year Nineteen Hundred and Seventeen, Anno Domini, Hampden-Sidney, minus a coach, and with only fair prospects, turned out a championship quint. Then came years of famine; lean, dry years, and then the dawn of the year Nineteen Twenty-Five-Twenty-Six. Coming on the heels of a poor season of the year previous, with a nucleus of but three letter men, Adkins, Squires and Ward, upon which to build, another season sparsely sprinkled with victories seemed to be looming up on the basketball horizon. But the "basketball gods," with their slogan of "Eventually, Why Not Now?" and their plans inscrutable, decreed otherwise. And the past season found Hampden-Sidney possessed of a team but little short of championship calibre, bringing home the bacon in eleven out of sixteen games, and losing only three within the State; to use Dr. Watkins' immortal phrase: "Risen Phoenix-like from her ashes———"

To begin with, everything in Farmville, the C. & O. Mechanics of Richmond, and the Union Theological Seminary, of Richmond, were run through in short order. High Point became low point in a rare and fast exhibition, falling by a five point margin. St. Johns, rivals in the old days, saw Moses descend to aid the Tigers in a victory, won by a single point in the final seconds of play. Lynchburg lost on their home court by a margin of four points. Then came the Carolina invasion, and Elon joined the ranks of the vanquished-by-a-point club, after a game replete with frills and thrills. Davidson is in a chapter by herself. She won by a seven-point margin. Read and weep. It never rains but what there must be a cloudburst. Furman found the team with the former snap and life gone; with the pepper-can completely empty, and she dragged off the weary Tiger to the tune of 18 to 56.

Then came Richmond bringing with her her usual jinx. And the Tigers' State Collegiate Championship hopes, so bright up till then, were knocked cold, 26 to 34. Randolph-Macon came to the Hill to fall by the wayside and be trodden under the paws of the Tigers, 45 to 29. Then the Maroons, of Roanoke, for the first time in three years, bowed to Hampden-Sidney in an intercollegiate fray, Roanoke holding the short end of a 27 to 29 count. Again came Richmond, bringing another set-back, this time by a score of 28 to 48. Randolph-Macon took into camp the next to the last game of the season, winning by one point. And the Tigers, in a football victory, a rough and tumble, catch-as-catch-can, Marquis-of-Queensbury rules affair, closed the season of 'Twenty-Six by a characteristic one-point margin win, over Lynchburg.

Lyons, a sure shot, an excellent floor man, and a bear on the defense, proved to be the find of the season, and was runner-up for high-point man in the State. Adkins, acting captain, showed marked improvement over last year, evincing excellent form in floor work and shooting. Wooton and Strader were both good, smooth performers, as were Squires, Roberts and Ward. Smith was another good man and is looked to for improvement. Richmond, Randolph-Macon, Davidson and Furman deny the fact, but to us they look like world beaters. With a schedule of sixteen games and a plus column of eleven, our horn of plenty is plenty full, and we are still blowing it. Out of a squad of eight men, two of them were Juniors, two were Sophomores and four were Freshmen—only three men of last year's fame. The mystery is yet to be unraveled, the secret is yet to be told; eleven victories out of a possible sixteen, three victories won by a one-point margin, another by two, and another by three, show conclusively that the fight was there. Perhaps the cause is to be laid at the feet of the whole squad for their team-play, their eagerness to learn, their fighting spirit; possibly there was better material with which to deal. But more probably the spirit of the Old Hampden-Sidney is once again invading the Hill and making felt its presence. As Rupert Brookes almost said:

> The Old Fight has come back, as a king, to the Hill,
> And paid his subjects with a royal wage;
> And the Hampden-Sidney Spirit walks in our ways again
> And we have come into our heritage.

We reiterate, the season was a happy surprise. We are proud of our great team; and to them that did it, to Manager Tabb, the man behind the team; to Coach Bernier, the man behind all that; and to the unseen element, force, or spirit, which made it all possible, we bow.

Baseball, 1925

THE baseball team of 1925 undertook one of the hardest schedules in Hampden-Sidney history. Eighteen games were scheduled, eleven in "Death Valley" and seven on the road. But with such men as Captain Dudley, Ott, Brinser, Harris and Liesfeld, it was early seen that Hampden-Sidney would have a team that would do credit to any school.

The Tigers made a great beginning by trouncing the Union Seminary, 26 to 1. The season proper began with the invasion of North Carolina on a three-day trip. The University of North Carolina, aided by a high wind, cold weather and the Tigers' week of no practice ran up a 14 to 5 score. Then the wounded Tigers turned on North Carolina State and defeated them, 4 to 2, and closed their most successful trip in years by a 6 to 4 victory over Elon College.

Upon returning home Johns Hopkins University was defeated, 9 to 2. Two days later the University of Pennsylvania downed the Tigers by a tremendous rally in the eighth inning. One Philadelphia paper commented on the dash, pep and fine play of Hampden-Sidney and complimented the Tigers' diamond as the best they had played on while in the South. The Tigers suffered their third defeat at the hands of Bridgewater to a tune of 6 to 1. On the following day "Deaque" Hundley pulled a feat believed to be unparalleled in college ball when he pitched two complete games in a single afternoon defeating Bridgewater and Lynchburg Colleges, each by 7 to 3 scores. Hundley's "iron-man" stunt goes on record as being as distinct and unique as that of the football team of 1900 which won three games in as many days. Hampden-Sidney defeated Elon for the second time, 6 to 2. After this came two reverses and a recovery, the Tigers falling to Richmond, 7 to 4, and to Guilford, 2 to 1, and then cleaning up Emory and Henry, 6 to 0.

On their northern trip the Garnet and Gray met defeat at Richmond, 7 to 4, and the following day, at Randolph-Macon, were nosed out in the eleventh inning, 3 to 2. At Georgetown, rain; and at the University of Maryland they lost again due to inability to hit in the pinches. In the final game of the season on "Death Valley" the Tigers severely clawed Randolph-Macon, defeating them 11 to 1. Newspapers rated Captain Dudley the best catcher in the State, while Ott's fielding and hitting featured in almost every game. Brinser led the team in batting with an average of 366 and in fielding with an average of 990; he also stole the most bases and scored the most runs. Hundley won seven games and lost three for an average of 700. Playing the hardest schedule in its history, Hampden-Sidney won nine games and lost eight, defeating leading colleges in Virginia and North Carolina.

Baseball, 1926

SPRING has come. And with it the dear, familiar sounds and sights of baseball have pervaded the campus. As we go to press, old Death Valley is, every afternoon, dotted with baseball aspirants going through the motions of a Peckinpaugh or a Cobb. With a nucleus of six letter men, and a wealth of promising material in the forty or more candidates, prospects are bright. Captain Brinser, guardian of the initial sack, is going stronger than ever. Squires is working in good form on third base, and Davis and Yeaman bid fair to annex the other two vacant places in the infield, though Laing, Scott and Hudson are hustling to oust them. Adkins and Simmerman, both of whom have pitched great ball, are certain of seeing mound service. Freshman Ranson is also displaying worthy wares in the box. Sonny Robinson has been left the extremely difficult task of filling the great gap left by Harold Dudley, but bids fair to shine there. Palmer, Davidson and Edmunds, all hard players, look best in the outfield, and Simmerman may spend his off-days from the mound there. Of the freshmen the aforementioned Ranson, Davis, Yeaman and Hudson seem superior by far. But the Harris twins show earmarks of ability and Blanton and Jefferson are looming brighter in the race for catcher. All in all, there seems to be the makings of a very reputable team. The schedule includes leading teams in Virginia and the South Atlantic Division, and early dope points to a season of as great brilliance as last year.

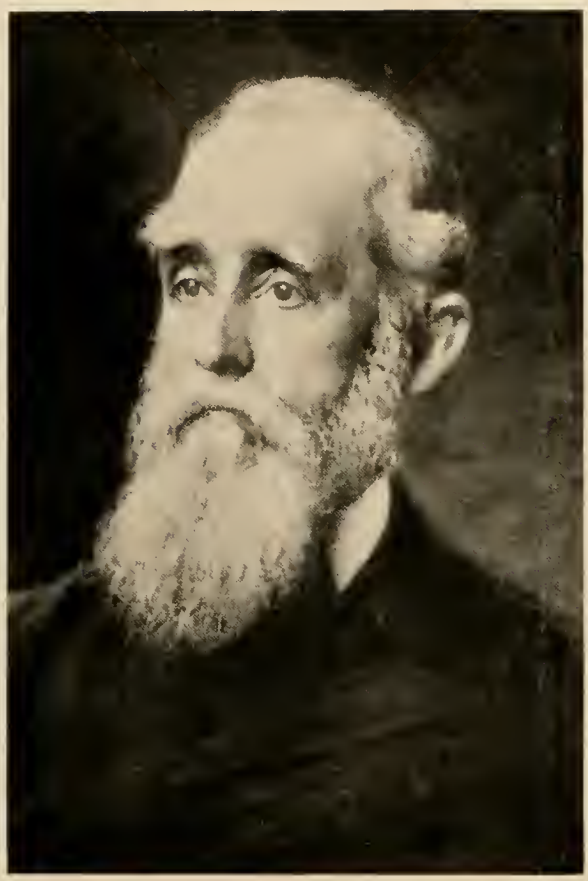

Track

IT IS only during the past few years that track at Hampden-Sidney has risen from the embryonic state of a minor sport. However, it has gained prominence with each passing season, and should this spring be on a par with that of any college of its class in Virginia. Last season, under Coach Bell, a particularly well-rounded team was turned out which met with no mean success in its four meets. Holladay's all-round work in the field events was astonishing, as was also that of Captain Sager, Richardson, Creecy and Ott, in fact, of the whole team. A few statistics will indicate probably better than words the character of the season.

Individual points scored by letter men last year are as follows: Holladay, 43; Creecy, 32; Ott, 23; Sager, 18; Reed, 16; Richardson, 13; White, 11; Myles, 9; McLaughlin, 7. Records in the various events follow: 100-yard dash—10 1/5", Richardson; 220-yard dash—23 2/5", Creecy; 440-yard dash—52 2/5", Creecy; two-mile run—10' 50", McLaughlin; high hurdles—19 1/5", Reed; broad jump—19 feet 8 inches, Holladay; high jump—5 feet 8 inches, Holladay; pole vault—11 feet 6 inches, Holladay; javelin throw—157 feet 5 inches, Ott; shot put—36 feet 7 inches, Sager; discus throw—106 feet 2 inches, Myles. Of these men Captain Richardson, Creecy and Myles have returned, and with Adkins of the 1924 team, Nance, Roberts, Reveley, Stephenson, Tabb, Johnson and Showalter of last year's squad, and M. A. Harris, H. W. Harris, C. H. Jones, B. H. Jones, A. S. Alexander, Montgomery and McLaughlin, of the freshmen, form an excellent nucleus which experienced hands can mould into an up-and-coming track team.

Tennis

PRESENT indications point toward a successful tennis team to represent Hampden-Sidney during the coming season. Although, without the services of a coach and much on which to build, the 1925 team made no great showing, yet Grover, Alexander and Kelley of that team have returned and give evidence of having profited much by their experience. Smith and Alexander, among the freshmen, are particularly strong in this branch of athletics, and with Dechert, Richardson and Hodgson, of last year's squad, are working hard for a place on the team. With this wealth of available material to choose from, court prospects are scheduled to again mount in 1926 to the position they held at Hampden-Sidney a few years ago.

Dr. RICHARD McILWAINE

FRATERNITIES

Richard McIlwaine, A. M., D. D., LL. D.

DR. McILWAINE, whose regime extended from 1883 to 1904, was undoubtedly one of the most remarkable men ever associated with Hampden-Sidney College. Assuming the presidency shortly after the reconstruction period, when the College was at its lowest ebb, he built it up until its enrollment was larger than it has ever been until recent years, increased the curriculum, by personal subscription raised by himself from friends of the College erected McIlwaine Hall, and in many other ways added to the College materially as well as spiritually. In addition to his executive duties, he held the chair of Moral Philosophy and Bible, and carried on all the correspondence of the College, financial as well as administrative. As a charter member of Zeta chapter of Beta Theta Pi, established at Hampden-Sidney in 1850 as its first national social fraternity, he is most fittingly chosen to represent the Fraternities.

Fraternities at Hampden-Sidney have long held a unique place in the history of the College. The students have been, as a whole, of a type so far superior in every respect to the general run, that fraternities, with a superabundance of available material, have flourished there as nowhere else. And the greater brotherhood of the College has remarkably adapted itself to the fraternity spirit. From the very incipiency of the College, fraternities have been inseparably connected with it. Records of the mother chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, at William and Mary, give evidence of the presence at Hampden-Sidney of its Beta chapter during Revolutionary days. After the demise of this chapter the secret literary societies, possessing elaborate paraphernalia and rituals upon which, experts have stated, several modern Greek letter fraternities have founded theirs, supplied the necessary fraternity atmosphere and were, in fact, fraternities. Though shortly after the introduction of the national Greek letter fraternity as now known, the Civil War completely disrupted the College and its fraternities; with the coming of new life to the College myriads of fraternities sprang up amain so that in the decade before and after 1900 there were nine chapters there, most of which were vitally important to their respective national organizations. A national president of one fraternity has stated on several occasions that its Hampden-Sidney chapter in the nineties was, all things considered, the best chapter of the fraternity. The quarterly magazine of another, whose "second founding" occurred in Cushing Hall in the convention of 1889, and whose Hampden-Sidney chapter has furnished nine grand officers, avers that this chapter "during the early and weaker life of the fraternity was largely responsible for its very existence." The work of the present era is self-evident. Truly, the fraternity life at this historic College has been a long and glorious one. —THE EDITORS.

DANDRIDGE SPOTTSWOOD

ACTIVITIES

Dandridge Spottswood

WE did not understand what it was all about (we at Hampden-Sidney away back in 1893), but we were perfectly sure that if it were Dandridge Spottswood's proposal it was, at any rate, something very sporty. In this grand confidence we had our pictures taken for the first KALEIDOSCOPE. Dandridge said we must all be in dress suits. I had none. He lent me his cutaway coat and pinned it up in front to look full-dress. This coat, with his white vest under it, gave me a display of shirt-front absolutely superb. During the thirty-three checkered years following, I have never again had quite that thrill of satisfaction that elevated me in dress clothes (apparently) into the glorious company of Dandridge Spottswood. Witness us on the old library steps, Page 5, KALEIDOSCOPE, 1893, Volume I. Dandridge Spottswood proposed and made for Hampden-Sidney its first college annual. He was also the editor-in-chief.

The annual, however, was only one of the many institutions here founded by our resourceful enthusiast. The fact is that Dandridge Spottswood introduced modernism to Hampden-Sidney; for student activities he was our turning point. It was Dandridge who helped to start our first football team; Dandridge who was its manager; Dandridge who was, at the same time, President of the Baseball Association, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Manager of the Baseball Team; it was Dandridge who organized the first ribbon society (The Owls, now defunct); Dandridge who brought us into Pan-Hellenism; I really think it was Dandridge who taught us innocents for the first time to make college yells—correct ones, I mean.

The remarkable thing about Dandridge Spottswood is that his college enthusiasms are perennial. Since he left Hampden-Sidney to take up engineering at Cornell he has been prominent in business and social circles and in club life in New York City; he has moved with ease in those charmed areas of the exclusive that would seem once and for all to isolate him from the happy-go-lucky days in an old colonial country college. Yet, from time to time, he returns to us with all his boyish enthusiasms still intact. In the midst of worldly wiseness he has not suffered the blight of disillusion. Of the men of his class and day still the most interested in athletic and fraternity life and in college traditions, still the most loyal son of his Alma Mater is Dandridge Spottswood.

—ASA DUPUY WATKINS.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dr. Watkins, at the present time Professor of English at Hampden-Sidney, was Associate Editor of the KALEIDOSCOPE, 1893, and Editor-in-Chief of the KALEIDOSCOPE, 1894.

Editorial

TO THE casual reader the foregoing pages may seem but a catalogue of the College. But we hope that the more assiduous may find therein in ever-present form the life at Hampden-Sidney, its spirit and its glorious traditions, as well as its characteristic activities, its inimitable associations, its heartiest joys, and some little of its pathos and sorrows. The representation of these as they exist in reality we believe to be the supreme function of a college year-book. Especially have we planned THE 1926 KALEIDOSCOPE to the end that in future years it may awaken in members of the student body the happiest and fondest memories of their years spent at Hampden-Sidney, that they may remember her as they best loved her, sheathed and still beneath the quiet trees. Such have been our intentions. Humbly we present our attempt at their fulfillment, the sesquicentennial anniversary volume of THE KALEIDOSCOPE.

Efforts extending from Norfolk to Los Angeles and back to Ohio in an endeavor to find someone qualified and willing to write the sketches of Dr. McIlwaine and Dr. Bull were unavailing. We were, consequently, forced to write them ourselves, unequipped though we were, from the scanty available material. We sincerely regret that such was the case.

There can be no more fitting way of closing than with a word of appreciation to those who have in a large measure made this volume possible. We wish to express our sincere appreciation, for their advice and criticism, to Dr. W. H. Whiting, Jr., Dr. A. D. Watkins and Dr. J. D. Eggleston, of the Hampden-Sidney College faculty, and to Mr. Dandridge Spottswood, of New York. For practical assistance we are even more grateful to The Stone Printing and Manufacturing Company, of Roanoke, and especially to Mr. C. D. Hurt, of that company. In the absence of any marked local talent, Miss Jo Culin, of the Farmville State Teachers College, most graciously consented to do much of our art work, and to her we are deeply indebted. Title page and Ex Libris are by John M. Preston. The photographs, with a few exceptions, are by Ogden.

—THE EDITORS.

Hampden-Sidney

When the years have turned their shadows from the west,
And the time has come when I begin to see the pomp and boast
Of life's bright heraldry were ever nought,
Then shall I go and rest
Where on thy dappled lawn the gypsy sun
Sifts through those massive oaks,
And all across
That rolling lawn I'll roam, nor feel the loss
Of anything.
For within thy ivied walls the One,
The Ones I'll find
Whose lives so sang with mine
That all men's dreams were put to shame.
As falls
The purple splendor of the moon on Grecian halls,
So there the mellow glow of useful years refine its light
With all the mystic sounds of magic night.
Tender will I love thee
Though no turn there be
For decades unto thy breast again.
But then
I come, I come!
As my light fades, these memories of thee will ease the fight.

Hampden-Sidney College

This institution opened its doors on January 1, 1776, and is the only college in America from which the students entered the Revolutionary War in a body.

Among its charter trustees were James Madison, afterward President of the United States, and Patrick Henry.

It stands high among the list of "small colleges" which have sent from their halls a remarkable number of leaders and successful men in every profession, in every walk of life.

It has always adhered to the standards of high scholarship and gentlemanly conduct. It is definitely Christian in its beliefs and outlook. In its physical equipment and in its courses of study it meets the most rigid modern requirements.

The degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science are given.

NEVER A LOSS

These investors will bear testimony to the fact that during our experience of more than thirty years, no investor has ever lost a dollar of either principal or interest on any mortgage negotiated through us.

FOR INVESTORS NOT SPECULATORS

We offer mortgages on Georgia farms, homes, and business properties, and first mortgage gold bonds in denominations of $250.00, $500.00 and $1,000.00, safeguarded by our experience of thirty years without a loss.

Send for our descriptive booklets, bulletins and facsimile testimonials especially from many investors in practically every section of Virginia.
